Mulching in Melbourne

Zee Ko

Black Cats

Talk about unfortunate timing.

The media circus descended on Melbourne Heart this week as Harry Kewell looked set to return to action. While crosstown rivals Victory took a breather after a torrid few weeks under the media glare, Heart's captain fronted a sizeable press pack in Bulleen on Wednesday morning.

"Fitness wise, I'm okay," Kewell said. "We just had to take things steady but I'm 100%."

An hour later, long after the hordes of cameras had left their Trinity Grammar training ground, the inevitable happened. Two minutes before the end of the training session, the former Australian star twisted his right ankle and was ruled out for the next two weeks. No surprise then that Heart's Thursday morning press conference saw an even larger press turnout, as coach John Aloisi was deluged with questions about Kewell. Heart fans will recall all too well the events of last season and the

Melbourne Heart fans will have to wait a little longer before they see captain Harry Kewell strut his stuff in some long awaited action. Oh well, at least you've got a GW souvenir poster to keep you company in the meantime. Photo: LIVE PIXEL misadventures that befell Vince Grella on his return to Australian shores, and the fact remains that Kewell has only managed one game out of four this season for his new team.

It's definitely not ideal preparation for Aloisi as the team looks to bounce back from consecutive losses on the road. The 3-0 score line against Brisbane flattered the hosts and Heart were perhaps unlucky to lose the game, but as anyone in football can tell you, it's all about results. High flying Western Sydney will not go down easily and Heart will need an even better performance to topple the Wanderers at AAMI Park.

Melbourne Victory meanwhile are happy to stay out of the lime-light. The 3-2 win over Wellington Phoenix has given new head coach Kevin Muscat some breathing space, despite a flat second half performance that almost saw Ernie Merrick pull off a comeback effort against his former employers.

The first 30 minutes or so was exhilarating if you were a Victory fan, the forward trio of Archie Thompson, Mitchell Nichols and James Troisi slicing through the Wellington defence at will and smashing in three goals in quick succession. It was scintillating fast-paced football, something which new Socceroos boss Ange Postecoglou had been envisioning when he signed the latter two in pre-season. Then Nichols went off injured and the wheels didn't so much puncture as fall off.

It will be a worry for Muscat how unimaginative and sluggish his players looked in the second half, as they crawled over the line despite an 84th minute Paul Ifill goal. Time might have run out on Merrick and the Nix, but other opponents might not be as forgiving as the season progresses. Muscat's 100% record is still intact, but only just. Much improvement is needed ahead of the trip to Sydney on Saturday.

One player who is definitely banging on the door is the explosive Andrew Nabbout. The bustling winger has scored consecutive braces against National Youth League (NYL) opposition and it was the AIS who were put to the sword last time out as they fell 4-1 at Lakeside Stadium. Most of you will remember his meteoric rise to fame last season, and he will definitely have good memories from that night at Allianz Stadium when his two goals sealed a come-from-behind win over a rampant Sydney outfit. The stage is set for a repeat performance, if Muscat sees fit to give him a seat on the plane over this weekend.

Also flying high are the boys from Melbourne Heart's youth team. They might not play at home till Round 7, but Heart's young guns are showing no ill effects as they maintained their perfect start to the season with a 1-2 win in Brisbane. Benjamin Garuccio was the man of the hour for the Red and White as they completed a comeback win against a gutsy Roar side. Next up is the Melbourne Youth Derby at Lakeside Stadium on Sunday, and you can expect a decent turnout as both teams will want the early bragging rights.

Last but not least, it's the moment women's football fans have been waiting for. The W-League kicks off this weekend and first up for Melbourne fans is the Grand Final replay on Sunday. It's a double header for Melbourne Victory as they welcome champions Sydney FC to Lakeside Stadium ahead of the NYL game. There are scores to settle from last season, but Victory have a new weapon up their sleeve and are unafraid to use it.

Lisa De Vanna looked a class above everyone else during last weekend's friendly draw against the WPL All-Stars and despite not getting on the scoresheet, there is no doubt at all that she will prove more than a handful for the Sydney defence. Watch out too for young starlet Emily Hulbert who is a bolter to figure at some stage for Victory in Round 1. The central midfielder is only 17, but could be following in the footsteps of Nabbout and Connor Pain if coach David Edmondson decides to throw her in at the deep end on the weekend. Watch this space.

SFC's Brogan prepares for W-League Season

By Peter McAlpine

This year is shaping up as a big year in the W-League, the women's domestic competition in Australia. The competition has eight teams- Newcastle Jets, Brisbane Roar, Western Sydney Wanderers, Canberra United, Melbourne Victory, Perth Glory, Adelaide United and last year's champions, Sydney FC.

Sydney FC are known as the 'Sky Blues'. Their captain is Dani Brogan and is seen as a senior player of this tight, youthful outfit. Ironically, she's only 25 herself. However this is enough to be named as leader of the group.

Dani says it's a little hard sometimes as she forgets how young the players are. A number of them have been playing at the elite level for years. This includes Matilda's Ellise Perry and Caitlin Foord.

"Sometimes have to just take a step back and remember how young they are."

Initially, Dani is looking forward to getting back on the field. She's been out for twelve months with an injury. She tore her ACL in her right knee 12 months ago. Dani had to have a knee reconstruction. After getting back to full fitness over the next few weeks she is hopeful of "leading all these guys to another championship." 12 months has been a really long time to be sitting watching on the sideline.

"I can't wait to get the boots back on."

The 12 months also bought a halt to Dani's international career as a Matilda. Her last matches for Australia were against the United States. Playing the American was hard even after Dani has been watching them for years.

"I never really knew how extreme Abby Wambach was and having to mark her..." She sees the Americans as phenomenal athletes. Dani finds the way they play the game is amazing and "is something that we have inspired to." She says to be able to play in front of 20,000 people on the American's home soil was "an experience I will remember forever."

Despite playing defence, Dani says these days you have to learn to play everywhere. Sydney emphasize good communication between their players, particularly with the goalkeepers and the rest of the team.

"Hopefully they are the ones who are guiding you on the field as well. So you generally have to watch what's going on as well in front and help the players in front of you because obviously we can almost hear the same thing so there's a lot of work to do."

Dani says it is the hardest hardest pre-season she's been involved in with different teams, like the Matildas being abroad. But she feels this is the best Sydney have looked in a pre-season. However she optimistically cautious

"None of that obviously counts unless you perform at the games that matters. But I've got a pretty good feeling about this year."

Garriock Announced as Wanderers Captain

Western Sydney Wanderers Westfield W-League coach Steve Roche has named Heather Garriock as the Club Captain for the 2013/14 season.

One of Australia's most decorated players, Garriock will wear the Captain's armband in her first season playing with the Wanderers.

"It's a massive honour to captain the Wanderers in my first season playing for the Club," said Garriock.

"Being the captain of any side is a big honour and to do it with the Wanderers I'm very, very flattened."

Boasting over 100 caps for the Matildas, Garriock was born and raised in Western Sydney and believes she is a perfect fit for the club.

"I grew up in Campbelltown, spent most of my life living there and I'm very proud to be from Western Sydney," continued Garriock.

"I always get stuck about it in the National Team but it's where I'm from, where I grew up and it's made me the player I am."

"Growing up around here we didn't get given things on a platter, you need to work hard and fight for your position - I'm really glad to be playing for Western Sydney."

With this being her first season back since having a child, Garriock believes that her life experiences in her year away from football will make her a valuable asset to the Club and to her new teammates.

"My perspective on football has changed since having a family recently, I'm calmer than I used to be and know I'm a role model to the younger girls," said Garriock.

"People think being captain is a big job whereas if you incorporate the rest of the players and get them to help you lead that's the most important thing rather than putting the onus on one or two people."

Western Sydney Wanderers kick-off their Westfield W-League 2013/14 season against Adelaide United on Sunday 10 November at Marconi Stadium. Kick-off is 2pm followed the Foxtel National Youth League team playing Brisbane Roar at 4:10pm.

Postecoglou names first Socceroo squad

Socceroos Head Coach Ange Postecoglou has unveiled a 22-player squad for the international friendly match against Costa Rica at Allianz Stadium in Sydney on Tuesday 19 November 2013 (Kick-off 7:30pm AEDT) as the Socceroos continue along the road to Brazil.

Korean-based Defender Alex Wilkinson gets his first call-up to the Socceroos squad after an outstanding season with Jeonbuk Hyundai in the K-League.

Luke Wilkshire, David Carney and Sasa Ognenovski are omitted for the Costa Rica friendly.

The other players to miss out from the previous squad, which was Holger Osieck's last as Australia's national team coach, are Jackson Irvine, Nikita Rukavytsya and Brett Holman.

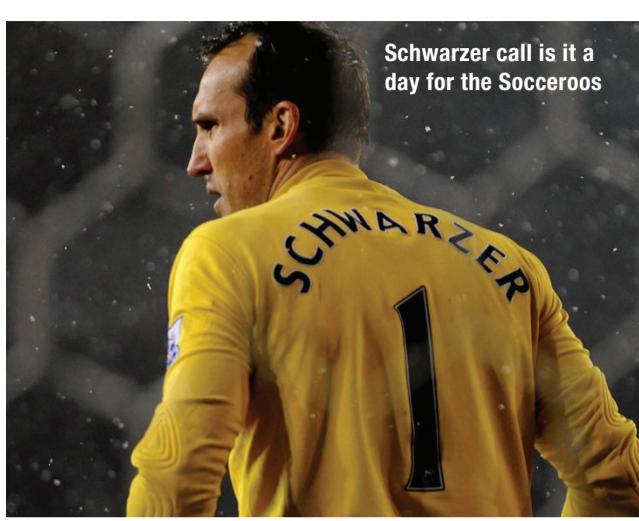

Jeonbuk Hyundai Motors defender Alex Wilkinson could earn his first senior cap, while Adelaide's Michael Zullo and Ivan Franjic of Brisbane Roar are the other fringe players to be included for the 2014 World Cup warm-up clash in Sydney on November 19.

Franjic, who won two titles under Postecoglou at Suncorp Stadium, has been in outstanding form for his club early in the 2013-14 season. His club team-mate Matt McKay and Melbourne Victory's Mark Milligan are the other A-League players selected.

The announcement of the squad has been tempered by the fact that Australia's greatest ever goalkeeper Mark Schwarzer announced his retirement from international football, after he was originally selected in the squad.

Schwarzer retires as the most capped Socceroo player in history, representing Australia with pride in 109 appearances for the National Team, which included two FIFA World Cups.

Postecoglou paid tribute to Schwarzer: "Mark has been a tremendous servant for the National team. He is our most capped Socceroo, has been one of our best performers over a long period of time and he has always remained passionate about playing for Australia. I know the Australian football community will join me in paying tribute to Mark for everything he's done for the Socceroos."

The 22-man squad contains four Hyundai A-League players, Ivan Franjic (Brisbane Roar), Matt McKay (Brisbane Roar), Mark Milligan (Melbourne Victory) and Michael Zullo (Adelaide United).

Ryan McGowan returns to the Socceroos squad after missing the previous matches against France and Canada as does Tom Rogic, who was ruled out of last month's matches due to injury.

"I'm excited by the squad we have named to face Costa Rica on November 19 at Allianz Stadium and look forward to working with the players and staff when they come into camp early next week," Postecoglou said.

"The first task is to have a good

Holman, Wilkshire, Carney, Thompson, Ognenovski out. Neill remains.

Schwarzer retires. Did he have a dummy spit? All good decisions so far.

The much anticipated first squad by Ange Postecoglou mostly confirmed the one key reality that blocked Holger Osieck's attempts to rejuvenate the squad: the cupboard is bare.

While on face value Ange has been bolder with selections like Bozanic, Franjic and Wilkinson, he's not dealing with crucial World Cup qualifiers. Still, the signs are good, especially the theme among the discards of them being from lowly clubs in the Middle East or simply players passed their expiration date. Only Mark Bresciano survives as a player from the Middle East, and that's most likely experience. Likewise Lucas Neill, the much maligned target of the fans' furore at the plodding status of the team, experience is vital. He's become the target of a bigger problem, not the problem himself. There's still none coming through to push him out and with Ognenovski gone and Ange looking to try other options at right-back - preferably an actual defender, not a midfielder a likely Wilkshire - some experience will be needed. As the new players are integrated, Neill can be eased out or even moved to right-back. Players like Archie Thompson and David Carney, they simply are passed their expiration and are squad players at best. Surely these are the spots to be reserved for integrating the emerging players.

The major shock with the squad was Mark Schwarzer retiring from the team upon the announcement. It's a very dubious way for such a most venerated player to leave the team, especially after all his comments of wanting Brazil to be his swansong. It reeks of a dummy spit after he didn't play in the recent matches against Canada and France, and Ange has not guaranteed Schwarzer would return as number one choice - and rightfully so

- under Ange's regime. Even as second or third choice, his experience would be invaluable, not to mention the spirit of the team coming before the individual.

Some of this individualism was exposed prior to the 2010 World Cup, as evidenced by the saga of Tim Cahill ejected from a Sydney bar and then an anonymous player emailing a Sydney newspaper to complain about prima donnas within the team, and the drama over Harry Kewell "will he or won't he" play at the Cup itself. Cahill still shows spurts of petulance, while Neill did himself no favours recently with some of his comments. Ange's first challenge is restoring the Australian pride and fighting mentality into this team, which he wonderfully exudes himself.

Then there's matters like ending this "no striker" system of playing Cahill as a striker. He's not a striker. His goal-rate has dried up since this move. He's most dangerous as a lurking midfielder. Put him there.

Ange seems on foot with this notion of playing players in their right positions. Again, good decisions so far.

A-LEAGUE TEAM OF THE WEEK Round 4

Follow Steven Talevski on twitter @steventalevski.

Compiled by Steven Talevski

On the Double: Jerome Polenz

There was a showcase of talent this week as a number of Australian players put their hand up for a call up to the Socceroos. The round saw 16 goals and crowds in double digits in each stadium as a flourish of attacking players had great games that saw seen Goal! Weekly's team of the week have attacking taste to its line-up. Here is our team of the week:

GK: Danny Vukovic - The inform goalkeeper of the A-League had a blinder of a game against Sydney FC. Vukovic tallied eight saves that were on target for the Sky Blues as he kept a clean sheet and helped the Glory to their second straight win.

RB: Scott Neville - The Newcastle fullback was the unlikely player to break the Jets goal draught as he slotted home the game's first goal. Neville was also good on the defensive front for the Jets, and was not at fault for the two late goals they conceded.

CB: Matt Smith - Brisbane's captain was under pressure in the first half, but managed to get out of there with a clean sheet. Smith led the team by example and helped the Roar to a three nil victory that saw him on the score sheet for the second time this season.

CB: Michael Thwaite - Thwaite was fantastic in defence for the Glory, stopping the Sydney FC attacks that just kept coming to help the Glory to a clean sheet.

RB: Adama Traore - The Ivorian born defender was one of Melbourne's best again as he controlled the right flank for most of the match. Traore looked comfortable defending the Phoenix attack while also chipping in with an assist.

CM: Carlos Hernandez - The Costa Rican returned to Melbourne in Phoenix colours and showed the Victory fans why they use to chant his name in the stands. Hernandez was the linchpin of the majority of Wellington attacks and played a sublime ball to Jeremy Brockie who found the back of the net.

CM: Marco Flores - Flores continues to impress in Mariners colours as he helped them come back from two goals down to earn a point. After being forced to re-take a penalty, Flores slotted the ball comfortably home.

RAM: Marcelo Carrusca - A member of Adelaide's Latin contingent, Carrusca was outstanding in trying to break apart the Wanderers defence. Carrusca scored the Reds sole goal in their 2-1 loss to Western Sydney, as they continue to improve under Gombau.

LAM: James Troisi - The on-loan Victory attacker netted two goals in an impressive attacking performance that has well and truly put him in contention for a Socceroos call up. Wellington's high line of defence struggled to control the attacker who seemed to continuously slide through their gaps.

ST: Tomi Juric - Playing against his old side, Juric was the difference between the two sides as he found the back of the net twice late in the match to help the Wanderers overcome the travelling Reds.

ST: Henrique - The Brazilian played the first half in midfield before playing in a more traditional attacking role in the second half. Henrique netted twice in the second half after splitting the Heart defence apart as the Roar won by an overwhelming three nil score-line.

Coach: Graham Arnold - The Mariners may have only picked up a draw this week, but Arnold mastered his substitutions that saw them come back from the two goal deficit. Arnold threw on both Mile Sterjovski and Matt Simon after conceding the shocking second goal with the former scoring a well-deserved equaliser.

Friday Night Double Delight For Polenz

into the bottom corner, leaving no chance for the keeper to reach it. Many at this point were wondering will Juric celebrate after scoring his former team and boy did he.

From there it looked like Western Sydney were going for the winner, not content with a mere draw. Aaron Mooy took a great right footed shot, similar to Juric's low, hard and aiming for the bottom corner, but only just went wide of the mark.

A couple of other opportunities arose for Bridge who just missed an incredible cross from substitute Tahj and Shinji who got a golden pass low in the box but sent it well over the goals. Finally the moment came in the 80th minute when once again Tomi Juric headed a cross from defender Polenz in the box, beating Elrich who was marking him for the second time. Did he celebrate again? Well, how could he not have celebrated? Not only did he just potentially score the winner from being down late in the game, it was against his former club and he beat the former Wanderer defender twice to see two beautiful goals. His celebration saw him go to the Red and Black Block to celebrate with the fans, the cheering fans knowing that their positive fighting attitude had paid off.

With now more goals than former forward Dino Kresinger, who was unsurprisingly let go from the club after one season, into only his fourth game, this young man is proving to be a decent fit for the team who was missing that target man. To many fans commenting on facebook following the game, he was by far the stand out player, even though all had played a great game.

Despite a couple of fowls from Polenz and Elrich that many commented should have seen them sent off no red cards were shown and Wanderers were able to please their fans with the first home win of the season. Should the reds have learned from their errors in their last two fixtures against the red and black? A lot will think so, but this time it was not to be, we will have to wait for the next fixture at their home to see them get their long awaited revenge. This makes it even more exciting now!

Mariners rally to disappoint Jets

By Ben O'Neill

Central Coast's trademark fighting spirit was on display in Newcastle on Saturday, with the Mariners clawing their way back from two goals down to earn a valuable Hyundai A-League point from an epic F3 Derby encounter against the Jets.

A close range Scott Neville strike in the 51st minute combined with a disappointing own goal by the Mariners five minutes later had Gary van Egmond's charges up 2-0 midway through the second stanza.

However Graham Arnold's men rallied, with Marcos Flores converting a penalty in the 65th minute to commence the comeback, while former Socceroo Mile Sterjovski lashed home the leveller with ten minutes remaining to ensure the reigning Hyundai A-League Champions travelled back down the M1 with their undefeated 2013/14 record intact.

While there was plenty of passion and endeavour on display from both sides in the opening 45 minutes of the contest, neither outfit went especially close to breaking the deadlock in the first half.

Andrew Hoole was looking the most likely outlet for a Jets goal in the opening period, and he pushed efforts high and wide of the woodwork in the 15th and 34th minutes respectively.

Several times Flores, Mitchell Duke and Michael McGlinchey looked threatening for the Mariners, however Newcastle custodian Mark Birighitti was scarcely troubled in a first stanza devoid of much goalmouth action.

If the first half failed to live up to the hype every F3 Derby generates, the second underlined why matches between the two local rivals are such keenly anticipated affairs.

Six minutes after the restart, Neville scored Newcastle's first goal of the new campaign. Following a smartly worked free-kick and a pair of close range parries from Central Coast shot-stopper Justin Pasfield, the former Perth Glory man poked the ball into the back of the net to send all but about 500 of the 13,744 attendees

Man of the Match

Marcos Flores (Mariners)

The Squadron is in raptures after taking an unlikely 2-0 lead in the F3 Derby. Adam Taggart joins in the fun.

into raptures.

The Jets wouldn't have to wait long to double their advantage, however their lead was extended through good luck rather than their own good play. Trent Sainsbury passed a ball back to Pasfield which the 'keeper misjudged, and though he sprinted back and belted the ball away from goal, the referee correctly ruled that the whole ball had crossed the goal line. Arnold reacted swiftly to the setback, with Matt Simon and Mile Sterjovski taking the field, and the wily mentor shifting the team's midfield formation to a diamond. The tactical shift paid dividends in the 64th minute when Joshua Rose advanced down the left and sent a cross into the box. Under pressure, Jets defender Connor Chapman handled the ball in the area and referee Kris Griffiths-Jones awarded a penalty.

Flores netted twice from the spot against Melbourne Heart in Hyundai A-League 2013/14 round 2, and he made no mistake on two occasions against the Jets. Flores's first effort nestled into the back of the net however Griffiths-Jones ordered a re-take after spotting encroachment. Keeping his cool, the Argentine again sent the ball beyond Birighitti to pull the Mariners back into the contest.

The goal clearly inspired the away side and soon after Flores's strike Simon had a header brilliantly saved by Birighitti, while Duke had a powerful shot from close range blocked by the desperate Jets defence.

But the Mariners were not to be denied by their northern foes, with substitute Sterjovski rifling a shot on the angle into the back of the net however Griffiths-Jones ordered a re-take strike slammed the woodwork, the ball fell to former LOSC Lille man who made no mistake from close range.

Following the fixture Central Coast Mariners Head Coach Graham Arnold revealed that he was happy with the way his mid-game change in system helped inspire the comeback.

"When I changed the system to the way we used to play in the first two years to a diamond with two strikers it caused them some problems, and I was happy that the boys adapted to that very well," he said.

Great timing: Scott Neville (partly obscured) leads the charge after the Jets score their first goal of the campaign.

Melbourne Give Muscat First Victory

By Andrew Bishara

Melbourne Victory survived a late scare from Wellington Phoenix to hold on to a 3-2 win in Kevin Muscat's first game in charge as head coach.

A blistering opening 30 minutes, saw the Victory take a 3-0 nil, thanks to a double by James Troisi and Archie Thompson.

Wellington's Jeremy Brockie kept the Phoenix in contention by scoring late in the first half, but the game was set for nervy finish, after substitute Paul Ifill scored with six minutes remaining.

Muscat came into the game looking to continue his 100% winning record following a win over the Newcastle Jets in 2012 when he was an interim coach.

The new Victory boss selected ten of the eleven players that featured in Ange Postecoglou's farewell game last week, with Pablo Contreras replacing Nick Ansell at centre back.

Former Victory coach, Ernie Merrick, back in the A-League with the Phoenix, made two changes to the team that drew 0-0 with the Jets last weekend. In came Louis Fenton for Leo Bertos and Albert Riera for Ifill.

Nine minutes in, Muscat got off to the perfect start when the out-of-form Thompson, opened the scoring.

Receiving the ball in the box, after Wellington's Ben Sigmund failed to clear a pass from Captain Mark Milligan, Thompson pounced with a sweet curling shot around former Victory 'keeper Glen Moss.

It was 2-0 in the 22nd minute when Troisi got his first when he swooped on a horrendous header from Durante, leaving himself one-on-one with Moss, where he coolly slotted the ball in the net.

Troisi got his second less than nine minutes later, when he scored the goal of the night – a delightful chipped ball over an oncoming Moss.

You betcha! James Troisi is the toast of the town after scoring a double on Melbourne Cup weekend.

A swift counter attack saw Kosta Barbarouses put the ball ahead of the sprinting Troisi, who after out-muscling the Durante, got the Victory's third.

With the Victory in cruise control, things took a turn for the worse when playmaker Mitch Nichols was substituted with an ankle injury and replaced by Gui Finkler.

With a comfortable lead, the Victory took the foot off the pedal, but were duly punished in 37th minute when Brockie slotted in the Phoenix's first.

A brilliant cross-field ball from former Victory playmaker, Carlos Hernandez, split open the defence for Brockie, who smashed the ball under the legs of Victory custodian, Nathan Coe.

The second half started much like the first, with Victory pushing forward in a bid to extend its lead.

Troisi almost had his hat trick when he rose highest in corner, but his header went over the bar.

The last 30 minutes of the game petered out, as the hosts looked to shut down the game, but it was turned on its head when Merrick brought on Ifill.

The Barbados international made the hosts suffer in the final ten minutes, when he made the scoreline 3-2.

Skipping past Milligan out on the wing, and Contreras inside the box, Ifill rocketed a shot between the legs of Coe yet again.

Try as they might, Phoenix could not find the equaliser, as the Victory defended deep to grab the win.

Muscat's first win as head coach, moves the hosts up to third on the ladder on 8 points, tied with the Wanderers and one behind league-leaders the Brisbane Roar. The Phoenix is eighth, with a goal difference separating them from bottom club, Melbourne Heart.

The Victory faces Sydney next week at Allianz Stadium, while the Phoenix hosts Perth Glory at AMI Stadium.

Second Half Strikes Secure Roar Win

By Jarrod Ellis

Brisbane Roar prevailed 3-0 over Melbourne Heart in an at times tetchy affair thanks to a second-half brace from Henrique and finished off by a volley from Roar captain Matt Smith.

The result extended Heart's dreadful run away from home, their last away victory coming against their hometown rivals all the way back in the 2012 season opener.

On this occasion the visitors had the opportunities to get something out of the match but instead saw a series of shots flash wide of the post or collect the woodwork.

Melbourne's best periods of play came in the first half and had John Aloisi's side not passed up some excellent chances the outcome of the match could have been very different.

Iain Ramsey and Michael Mifsud both had excellent chances inside of the first twelve minutes but both put their shots inches wide of goal. Mifsud in particular should have done better, having been set up for an opportunity thanks to a stray pass from Corey Brown.

Brisbane struggled to make it out of their own half for the next quarter of an hour, Melbourne taking the game to the home side and pressing high up the pitch.

It wasn't until the 25th minute that Brisbane had their first clear cut chance. With Besart Berisha out injured the Roar would always need to find goals from other areas and when Matt McKay wriggled through the Melbourne defence it appeared it may arrive from a most unlikely source, but it wasn't to be.

After a consistently excellent team performance Heart would threaten to finally make the breakthrough mere moments before halftime. Michael Theo spilled a Migliorini free-kick behind before eventually collecting a header from the resultant corner, the action bringing the half to a close.

Despite all that good work in the first forty-five Heart's afternoon in Brisbane began to take a turn for the worse within three minutes of the restart when Henrique put the ball into Redmayne's net.

Latching onto a lofted ball from Luke Brattan, Henrique, playing more centrally after the break, chested the ball down before placing his shot past Redmayne.

Matt Smith gets that winning feeling after scoring the third goal in emphatic fashion for Brisbane.

Melbourne came within a whisker of equalising on the hour mark. Mifsud, who had gone so close to scoring in the first half, rattled the woodwork with a long range shot that left Theo grasping at the air.

With the game hanging in the balance Mike Mulvey introduced Dimitri Petratos for Kwame Yeboah in the 64th minute and the change had an immediate effect.

Collecting the ball for his first touch of the game within a minute of his introduction Petratos cut in from the right and fired a shot at Redmayne. His shot was saved but the ball then fell invitingly for Henrique for a simple finish.

The Brazilian was forced from the pitch shortly after due to injury, replaced by Brandon Borello, the eighteen year-old making his first appearance in the A-League.

Henrique's absence didn't halt Brisbane's charge, the home team adding a third in the 77th minute. McKay made his way to the bye line after a Brisbane set piece before sweeping a cross into the Melbourne six-yard box that found a waiting Matt Smith.

Mifsud threatened in the dying stages by the Maltese international's name was kept from the scoresheet and Melbourne Heart were left scoreless in their sixteenth consecutive away game without a win.

Despite suffering another heavy away defeat John Aloisi was keen to look to the positives after the match.

"Look, I was happy with the performance," Aloisi said

"I thought that we took the game right to Brisbane, especially in the first half, we created a lot of good chances and we stopped them from playing."

"We made it hard for them. When you come to Brisbane and you create probably five one-on-ones, you think you're going to get more out of it.

"So I can't ask any more from my boys, the effort was great."

Perth Glory have capitalised on a missed offside call to consign Sydney FC to a narrow 1-0 defeat nib Stadium on Saturday.

The Sky Blues dominated the match, but it was the Glory who walked away with their second home triumph from as many games.

The hosts' goal came when Japanese winger Ryo Nagai was brought down in the middle of the penalty area by Sydney goalkeeper Vedran Janjetovic.

But replays showed Nagai was offside by at least a metre when team-mate Jamie Maclareen crossed the ball.

Referee Ben Williams was quick to blow his whistle and hand Janjetovic a yellow card, with Nicky Carle also booked for remonstrating as the Sky Blues ferociously protested the decision.

Steven McGarry then stepped up to the spot and converted the penalty to put the Glory ahead after just nine minutes.

It wasn't the only offside call in the first half that left players and spectators scratching their heads.

Perhaps perturbed by the initial controversy, the assistant referee called Maclareen offside in the 23rd minute, despite appearing to be onside, just as the Glory striker broke free for a one-on-one opportunity against the Sydney goalkeeper.

The controversy overshadowed the returns of Alessandro Del Piero and Shane Smeltz, who both came off the bench in the second half but had little impact.

Del Piero received a mixed welcome from the Perth crowd when he was introduced in the 63rd minute after missing last week's loss to Western Sydney with a calf injury.

The 38-year-old Italian superstar rejected the offer of the captain's band from former Socceroo Brett Emerton, who worked tirelessly for his side in the first half.

Sydney squandered several golden chances to put the ball in the back of the net, with Carle and Mark Warren both forcing Glory custodian Danny Vukovic into action and Ali Abbas mistiming a header into an open goal.

Faces in the crowd: Perth Glory keeper Danny Vukovic anticipates Alessandro Del Piero's glancing header

A spiteful first 45 minutes saw four players booked, including Perth pair Scott Jamieson and Matt Davies for reckless challenges.

Sydney continued to attack hard in the second half, with Richard Garcia's header in the 56th minute just sailing over the bar.

McGarry then looked set to score his second goal of the match after pouncing on a clever pass from Ryan Edwards and running circles around Sydney defender Tiago Calvano, but his shot was narrowly wide of the target.

Matt Thompson had Sydney's best chance of the second half, with his low shot on goal being deflected by Vukovic into the left post and out for a corner.

New Zealand international Smeltz, playing his first match since April following hip surgery, was lively in the final minutes with two attacking runs, but also missed a chance to pass to McGarry in open space.

TV Heaven

Matthew Naqvi

What a reversal we have seen in the A-League! There were goals aplenty this round with a total of 16 goals including 5 goals in one game between Melbourne Victory and Wellington Phoenix. There was plenty of controversy too with poor refereeing decisions costing Adelaide United and Sydney FC much needed points. Things are heating up and this week's action will give us a better sense of where each team sits.

This week's A-League Friday night game on SBS is between Melbourne Heart and Western Sydney Wanderers. While Heart is on the bottom of the ladder and coming off a 3 goal loss, their record is deceptive. Last week Heart played very well and missed very gettable chances. Coach John Aloisi was happy with the way the team played and will hope they play that way again.

Western Sydney Wanderers secured a hard fought win over Adelaide United in a spiteful match which saw a few brutal tackles, particularly by the Wanderers' Jerome Polenz. The media scrutiny forced Wanderers coach Tony Popovic to defend his player and emphasises that he isn't a thug. There is no doubt the referees will be on close watch this week. WSW will be strong for Melbourne Heart and take the three points but Heart should be valiant in defeat.

The biggest game of the weekend for A-League action is between the bitter rivals Sydney FC and Melbourne Victory on Saturday night at Sydney Football Stadium. Victory have won two and drawn one of the last three encounters between the teams and this game shouldn't be any different. Melbourne Victory is in great form this season and they are only getting better with the forwards beginning to understand each other. Sydney has been woeful in defence and Victory's style of aggressive attacking will expose Sydney. Melbourne Victory should take home the three points with a 3-1 win. Keep your eyes on James Troisi who is in fantastic form and vying for a Socceroos recall.

The EPL has another blockbuster game of the round between Arsenal and Manchester United. Last week saw Arsenal get the better of Liverpool to secure top spot and a win in this game will only further their lead in the early stages of the season.

On the other hand Manchester United has beaten two teams towards the lower end of the ladder and has generally been out of sorts this season. Given Arsenal's deadly form and finishing, they should take a big 3-1 win over the Red Devils.

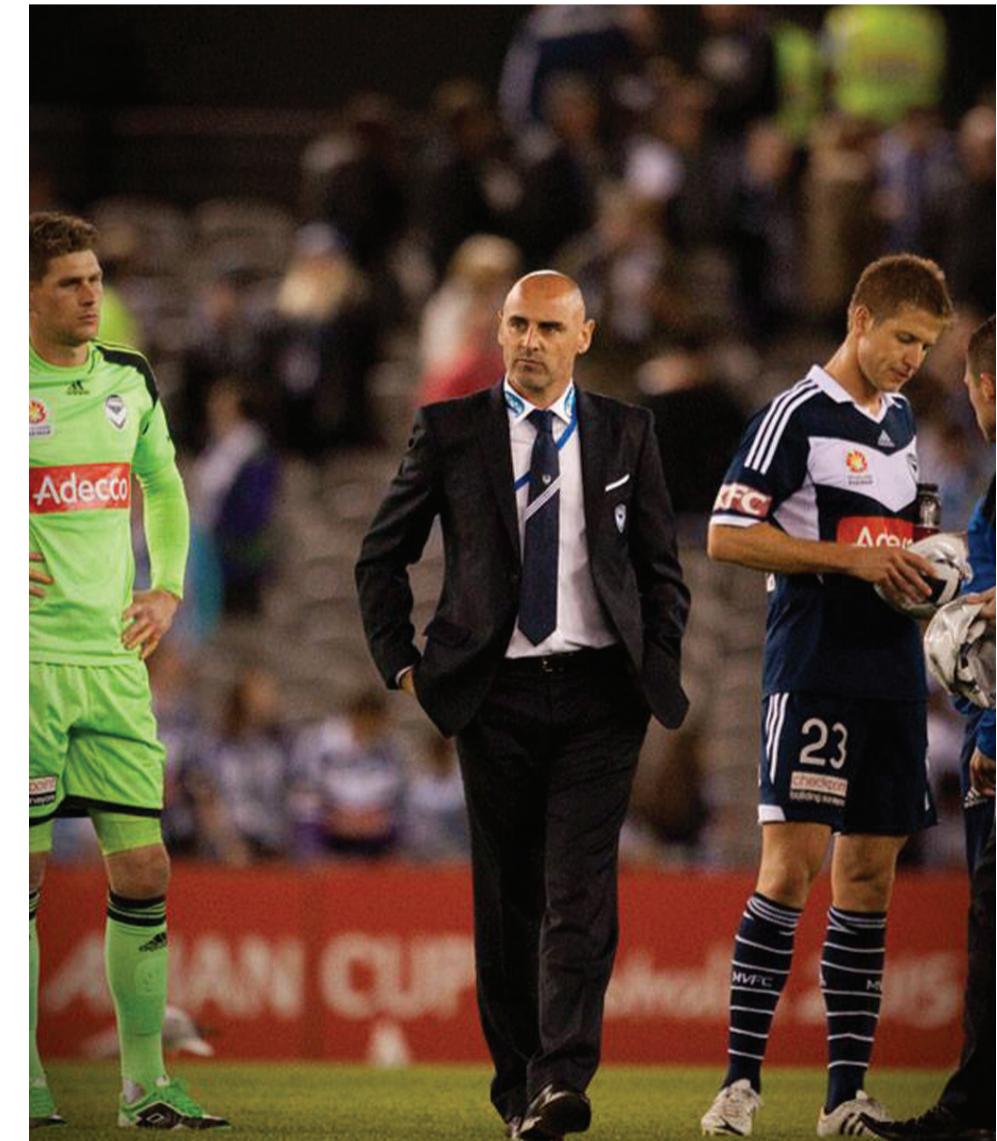

Tottenham and Newcastle is going to be an intriguing match-up. Spurs have continued their great form from last year and are sitting in fourth spot. They have beaten Hull City and West Ham in recent weeks and drew away to Everton last week.

Newcastle had a massive win over Chelsea last week and drew against Liverpool but lost to second last placed Sunderland last week. This kind of form is unsettling for Tottenham as Newcastle can get another big win to their name this season if they play to their potential. More than likely this will be a great match with both teams sharing the points.

To cap everything off, make sure you tune into SBS for your comprehensive wrap-up of football news with The A-League Highlights Show and The World Game on Monday night, while Thursday FC continues to improve with their mix of football news and entertainment on Thursday night.

Enjoy plenty of football action this weekend and hopefully your team wins.

Ahhh, the stressful world of football management. At least Kev doesn't have to worry about losing his hair. Photo:ANITA MILAS

- It's bad for your self-esteem
- It can cause high blood pressure
- Online is no substitute for Offline.

The increase in popularity of Social Media, aka Facebook and Twitter, spreads both good news and bad, as they occur and in a blink of an eye.

And this was certainly the case when Victoria's Finest Man In Black was assigned to the Brisbane Roar Vs. Melbourne Heart Match last weekend, with a rather dubious decision causing punters to go absolutely ballistic on Facebook and Twitter, when a Brisbane Roar Player was adjudged to be offside from a throw in.

Seems that the Man In Black had Trigger Finger that night, as the call for offside was made by his assistant who raised the flag, once the throw in took place.

The Socceroos Squad has been announced for the upcoming friendly against Costa Rica, with Mark Schwarzer announcing his retirement from International Football just before the squad was announced.

The beginning of Postecoglou's anticipated neonisation (Sounds like an Andy Harper Word) commenced with Wilshire, Holman, Thompson, Brosque, Ogdenovski and Carney all being omitted, the squad looking quite young in comparison to previous Socceroos' squads.

Until next week.

Melb Heart v West Sydney Wanderers

Fri Nov 8 AAMI Park 7:30 PM

Heart Aim To Break Drought

Adrian Houghton

Bottom of the table Melbourne Heart host second-placed Western Sydney Wanderers at AAMI Park on Friday night.

The Heart were desperately unlucky to receive a 3-0 drubbing at the hands of Brisbane Roar last weekend, after producing some scintillating football in the first half. John Aloisi's men carved out numerous goalscoring opportunities, only to see a lack of composure in front of goal fail to translate their dominance into a deserved a lead.

Even the Roar's coach Mike Mulvey described his team as "clueless", despite the final scoreline, which will provide the Heart with a degree of solace.

Brisbane's eventual quality in the final third came to the fore, and although it was harsh on the Heart, it demonstrates the team's shortcomings in attack.

The Red and White will feel aggrieved to be the division's worst placed side after four games, but they have scored just twice in four matches.

Prior to their second loss of the campaign, the Heart relinquished a two-goal lead against Central Coast and suffered a narrow defeat to Perth Glory.

The opposition doesn't get any easier for the Heart, who face a Western Sydney side fresh from a spirited come-from-behind victory on home soil against Adelaide United.

The Wanderers' No. 9 Tom Juric was the match winner with a fine brace that maintained his team's unbeaten start to the season.

While the visitors had 64% of possession and exemplified some expert passing football that Josep Gombau will look to perfect into an art form, it couldn't thwart the Wanderers' clinical play.

The Heart defence will need to be wary of their opposition's right flank where German right-back Jerome Polenz links up brilliantly with dangerous winger Youssouf Hersi.

Wellington Phoenix v Perth Glory

Time Travel The Pivotal Difference

Joe Gallagher

Another week passes, and it's a very similar narrative for the Wellington Phoenix.

Ernie Merrick has been singing from the same song sheet all the way through this year, and Monday night's demoralising 3-2 loss to Melbourne Victory consigned Wellington to ninth on the A-League ladder ahead of this weekend's visit to Christchurch to host Perth Glory.

For so long it seems the Phoenix have been content with taking 'positives' from fixtures like Monday's at the Etihad Stadium. Good in patches, let down by a few lapses in concentration and might have scored more if they were a bit luckier higher up the park.

But the reality is that Wellington's two points from the opening four rounds of the competition is not good enough to meet the side's finals ambitions. On Saturday they simply must be taking points, not positives on the flight from Canterbury.

Enough is made of travel factor each time Perth makes the arduous trip across the continent to face the Phoenix, and vice versa. But Wellington themselves have been clocking up the miles since the season began; they've travelled between the capital, Sydney, Napier, Melbourne and now Christchurch in the opening month of the A-League season.

Throw into that the extraordinary mileage of their All Whites internationals – Jeremy Brockie, Glen Moss, Leo Bertos and Andrew Durante – and the Phoenix could be afforded the excuse of exhaustion.

That quartet, along with Durante's defensive partner in Ben Sigmund, have narrowly avoided missing this weekend's match due to their commitments with the national side. An eleventh hour deal between club and country agreed to push back kick-off on Saturday to allow the six – and Perth's Shane Smeltz – to board a plane to Los Angeles with the rest of their All White teammates later in the evening.

The loss of Smeltz might not have been too damaging to Perth's ambitions, with the striker still on his way back from injury.

But his club have found themselves on a bit of a roll of late; two wins from two has seen them sitting pretty in the A-League's top four and while Wellington needs a win to avoid losing touch with the likes of Perth, Melbourne, Western Sydney, Central Coast and Brisbane, the Glory could leapfrog the lot with a win in the Garden City.

The trip could see the debut of for-

Reds Prepare to Ground Jets

Matt Mays

Adelaide will be hoping to bounce back t winning ways as they welcome Newcastle Jets to Coopers Stadium on Saturday evening.

The Reds have lost their last 2 games, showing great spells of possession but showing little in the final third.

The Jets are still looking for their first win of the campaign, but are boosted with the return of marquee signing Emile Heskey, who returns from a groin injury.

The Reds too welcome back one of their strikers. Bruce Djite completed 90 minutes in the Reds 1-1 youth team draw at Western Sydney Wanderers last Friday and was thrilled to be back in contention.

"It felt tough physically and it was a youth game," Djite said.

"It was hot 34C on Sunday it was dry, the conditions were very tough but we play in summer. Fitness is key."

Djite is expected to stroll straight back into the squad after Brent McGrath's short term contacts with the club came to an end.

Assistant coach for the Newcastle Jets Craig Deans has admitted their is no need for major changes to the trip to Adelaide and is encouraged after their recent performances, despite throwing away a 2 goal lead against the Mariners last week.

"I think we have to focus on what we've been doing well in the last couple of weeks especially, which has been working hard and pressuring people on the ball and not giving good players time to cause us damage."

"To change people is not something that you want to do, so if we can keep some consistency to the team that would be the preference."

As far as the game goes, Adelaide surely head into it as hot favorites. Unbeaten at home this season, the Reds will be looking to bounce back after a convincing performance in Paramatta last week. However, the Jets, without Heskey, produced resilient performance in their last trip to Adelaide picking up a 1-1 draw.

I expect Adelaide will continue their philosophy of possession football and the Jets will find it difficult to cope with the quality on show. If the Jets have any chance, they have to take their chances when they come and hope that the return of Heskey will give them a chance. But Adelaide will win this one comfortably.

Sydney FC v Melbourne Victory

Sydney FC in desperate need of Victory

Bryson Ferriera

Sydney FC will be looking to put a tough opening month behind them this weekend when they face Kevin Muscat's undefeated Melbourne Victory, in the first Big Blue of the season.

After a promising opening round victory over the Newcastle Jets, Sydney FC fans have endured losses to Brisbane Roar, the Western Sydney Wanderers and Perth Glory over the past three weeks.

In their last start, Perth Glory came away with a victory over the under-fire Sky Blues at nib Stadium, but only because of a botched offside call that led to penalty.

Sydney FC more than held their own against the young Glory team, and even dominated the game at certain times, but the offside call [or lack thereof], was the difference in the end.

Richard Garcia and Nicky Carle created chances throughout the game, and if not for a man of the match performance from Danny Vukovic in goal, the result may have swung the way of the men in blue.

Regardless of the significant improvements by Frank Farina's men, expectations are always high for Sydney FC, and a loss against their original rivals in the Big Blue on Saturday could spell trouble for the manager.

Chairman Scott Barlow has offered a vote of confidence in Farina, but acknowledges the supporters are right to be upset with the club's dismal start.

There's no doubt the club should give Farina every chance to try and implement his new style of play, the reality is however, the fans demand results.

Sydney FC's crunch match against arch rivals Melbourne Victory this Saturday night looms as the final straw despite the chairman's public support for the manager.

Contrastingly, spirits are high at Melbourne Victory despite losing Ange Postecoglou to the Socceroos.

Although there have been recent changes at the Victory, some things don't change, after they managed their seventh victory in a row against a struggling Wellington side.

A drought-breaking goal from Archie

Thompson and a first half brace from James Troisi, put the Victory 3 nil up in what new coach Kevin Muscat described as 'the best 30 minutes of their season so far'.

The Victory didn't have it all their own way however, particularly in the second half when Wellington took control of the midfield battle and dictated the tempo of the match.

The result was impressive enough however, and the Victory will head to Allianz stadium confident of another three points having taken 7 out of a possible 9 from their interstate rivals last year.

Despite their recent form slump, the Sky Blues will see Saturday's crunch match as an opportunity to get their season back on track, and perhaps ensure they don't have another coach anytime soon.

If Sydney FC can improve on their showing in Perth and convert their chances into goals they should be able to compete with a strong Victory outfit.

The return of superstar captain Alessandro Del Piero into the starting lineup should improve an attack that hasn't scored in three weeks.

The Big Blue always creates drama, and expect nothing less in front of another bumper crowd at Allianz Stadium on Saturday.

The Sky Blues are in desperate need of a win, and an improved performance against Perth suggests a victory isn't far away.

Unfortunately, the Victory should be too strong and the Cove may have to wait another week to see their team get back on the winners list.

CC Mariners v Brisbane Roar

Sun Nov 10 Bluetongue Stdm 5:00 PM

Grand Final Preview after Rd 5?

Adrian Deans

The Mariners always start slowly.

A win and three draws is pretty good by Mariners' standards in the early season. Graham Arnold reckons they deliberately aim to start slow, physically, in order to build into the season without getting fatigued too early.

Looking back over the Arnie reign, there have always been some poor early results, but they always come good, so we have to assume he knows what he's doing.

But Round 5 is starting to get on a bit, and fighting resilience to claim a point is one thing – it's time to start logging some wins.

For that reason, the visit of Brisbane is poorly timed. They are playing formidable football and rightly lead the league. Without even master striker Besart Berisha at his disposal, Mike Mulvey has put together an excellent unit who are buzzing along like clockwork.

The form of Ivan Franjic has seen him selected in Ange Postecoglou's inaugural Socceroos squad, and the much maligned (from a left back Socceroos perspective) Matt McKay has been utterly sensational in recent weeks – playing in his preferred central midfield position.

It will be interesting to see how those two play – buoyed by return to the Socceroos fold – against the hugely impressive Mariners midfield led by Marcos Flores and Michael McGlinchey.

Once again, it is quite incredible what Arnie has done with another completely regenerated team. The Mariners are annually victims of their own success – losing all their best players but still managing to punch above their weight as they have done nearly every year since the League began. This year's models likely to move on in the offseason (or even January) are Trent Sainsbury (surprisingly left out of the Socceroos squad), Mitchell Duke (disappointed to be left out of the Socceroos) and maybe even Storm Roux – impressive enough at right back to be in the All Whites squad to take on Mexico for the last spot in Brazil.

One player who will be desperate to redeem himself after last week is Justin Pasfield, who has combined numerous world class saves this season with a couple of breathtaking errors. I hope he's not losing his concentration through uncertainty about his position because on his

Football Firsts

Roy Hay

Sports historian Andy Mitchell has uncovered the Australian origins of a founder of English soccer.

It is an English institution, which in 1863 created the sport of association football. Yet, as the Football Association celebrates its 150th anniversary, new research has revealed that one of its founders was actually Australian.

When an invitation was published in London in the autumn of 1863 for club captains to define once-and-for-all a mutually agreeable set of rules, FH Moore was among the small group of men who gathered in the Freemasons' Tavern near Covent Garden. He was recorded in the minutes as one of two representatives of Blackheath Football Club, the other being FM Campbell.

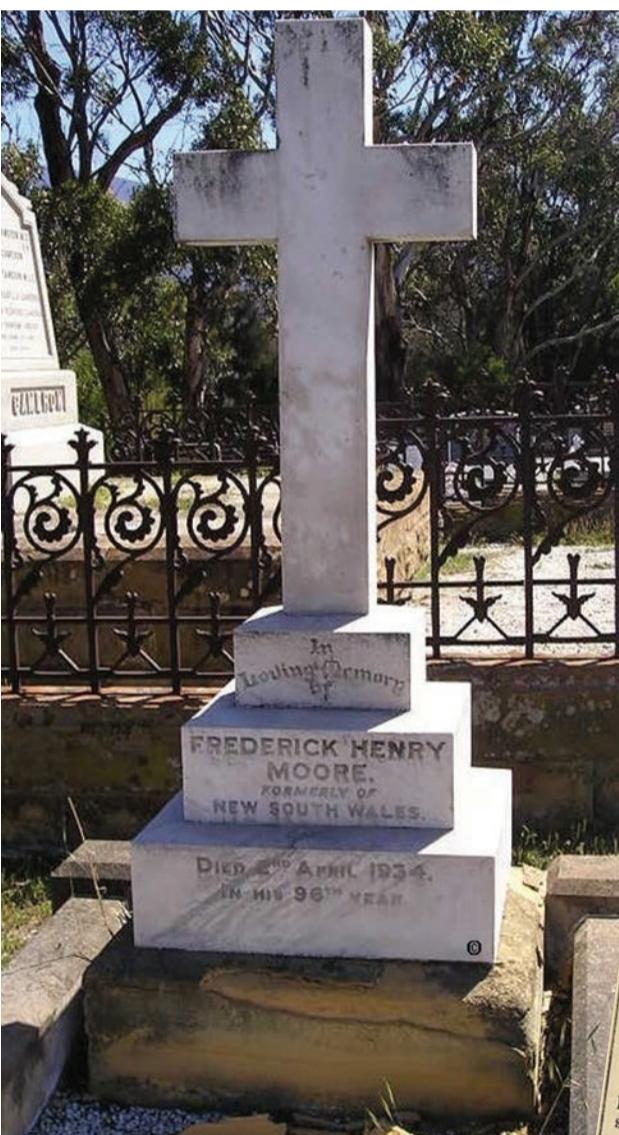

That meeting on 26 October 1863, and five subsequent gatherings over a six week period, laid down the Laws of the Game for the first time. But what has never been realised is that Frederick Henry Moore was from Western Australia, and had only come to England to finish his education.

It is not known whether he first kicked a ball before leaving home, but during the 1850s, Australia's schools started playing each other at football, under hybrid rugby rules. In London, however, matches between schools or clubs were few and far between, because nobody could agree on a wide range of issues such as handling, charging, hacking and offside, not to mention the size of ball, dimensions of the field and methods of scoring.

There was a clamour for compromise, and 15 players are known to have attended that opening meeting, representing eight clubs and four schools. It was a valuable exercise which drew on the knowledge of players who had experience of a wide variety of football rules. While the perception is that they were Londoners, only five had been born in the capital and alongside Fred Moore the Australian there were also two Scots.

On the first night, Arthur Pember of No Names (Kilburn) was elected president, Ebenezer Morley of Barnes as secretary, and Blackheath's Francis

Campbell became treasurer. That was the easy part; many hours were spent in lively and, at times, acrimonious debate before the laws of association football were eventually published in December.

Fred Moore and Francis Campbell were vocal advocates of the rules they knew and loved. But while there were initially some concessions to rugby influence, such as the 'fair catch' and a ban on forward passes, not everyone could accept the conclusions and they were ultimately outvoted. This marked the parting of the ways from Blackheath Football Club and their allies who insisted on the 'manly values' of rugby rules and could not accept the elimination of 'hacking'. The club resigned from the Football Association just weeks after paying the membership fee of one guinea, but they stuck to their principles and Blackheath later found itself in the unique position of also being a founding member of the Rugby Union in 1871.

By then, Fred Moore had long gone. He was born in 1839 at Oakover, the family farm and vineyard at Guildford in the Swan Valley, Western Australia. His father Samuel had emigrated from Ireland after the failure of a glass manufacturing business, and became a prominent businessman, with interests that included farming, cargo shipping and the chairmanship of the Western Australia Bank; but he died in 1849, leaving his wife to look after a young family.

Fred had to grow up quick, and the following year, aged just 11, he took over the wine production on the farm, and showed a precocious talent in doing so. However, he needed a formal education and when he was 14 he was sent to Sydney, and from there to London, to finish his schooling. He went to Blackheath Proprietary School, a small boarding establishment

The second week of National Youth League action saw more goals than in the first, as teams began to hit their stride having got their first matches out of the way.

Brisbane Roar kicked off the weekend's proceedings by hosting Melbourne Heart, and were left disappointed as a late header from Heart's Ben Garuccio stole the points for the visitors in a 2-1 victory.

Ross Archibald got the opener against his former side, finishing off a rebound after Nick Kalmar's free kick hit the crossbar.

Devante Clut, who had an impressive afternoon, scored the equaliser, and probably could've had more should his finishing been better.

Brisbane would have been disappointed to have lost because of two set pieces, but can take some pride in their performances so far, pushing both Melbourne clubs right to the end.

The result kept Heart in second place as Sydney FC made the most of their chances against Perth Glory to seal a 3-0 win away from home. Goals from Mitch Malia, Blake Powell and Alex Urosevski gave the Sky Blues something to smile about, especially considering the troubles surrounding the senior side.

Perth had plenty of chances of their own, but were unable to find even a consolation, with Brandon O'Neill in particular hitting the crossbar from range, summing up the afternoon for Perth Glory.

They will be looking to turn their fortunes around and score their first goal of the season against the AIS, who were comfortably beaten 4-1 by Melbourne Victory.

While the scoreline was comprehensive, Victory coach Darren Davies was disappointed by the level of performance and suggested that his side can play even better.

It was almost pedestrian pace for much of the contest at Lakeside Stadium, as Andrew Nabbout scored another brace to command a first team spot when Barbarouses leaves for Mexico.

He was joined on the scoresheet by forgotten midfielder Jimmy Jeggo and new boy Anthony Duzel, scoring his first goal for Victory.

The AIS tried to get into the game, but lacked a cutting edge in the final third, but got a reward for their efforts when Darcy Madden scored a consolation.

At Marconi Stadium, Bruce Djite returned from injury to figure in a strong line-up for Adelaide United, but they were unable to defeat the Wanderers, as the game ended in a 1-1 draw.

Jordan Elsey opened the scoring for Adelaide, but their lead was short lived as Lawrence Hanna equalised a mere two minutes later.

It was a close contest with the Wanderers finding themselves on top by the end, but they couldn't take the lead and picked up their first point of the season.

In the youth F3 derby, Newcastle claimed the bragging rights with a 2-1 home win over Central Coast. Radovan Pavcevic opened the scoring by taking advantage of a Mariners defensive mix up to score Newcastle's first goal.

Mariners 'keeper David Bradasevic and Adrian Vlastelica were involved in a mix up, highly ironic given the mistakes which cost the senior side the night before.

Jesse Curran then struck back with a brilliant free kick, but the Mariners were again the architects of their own downfall when Josh Forbes headed a Newcastle free kick into his own net.

The result was far from secured for Newcastle in a nervy finish, and had 'keeper John Solari to thank for making sure they came away with the win.

It was a big result for Newcastle, who atoned for their loss against the AIS in the first round.

The Melbourne derby headlines next week's action, with both sides seemingly flying at the start of this season, it promises to be a cracker.

Aussie Stocks Rise In Overseas Markets

A massive month for our Aussies Abroad. A change to the national manager, and now we wait to see what Ange's first squad will look like. Fair to say that another 8-10 players may suddenly feel their claims for a ticket to Brazil have improved. Starting with club football, a healthy sprinkling of Aussies appearing week in and week out. Not all about the English Premiership though with Germany, Holland, Greece and Switzerland all popping up with Aussies appearing. Several competitions across Asia have completed their seasons, namely China and Thailand, while Japan and Korea have about a month to go. Another quiet month for transfers but the closing of the Asian season may see a few loan deals in the New Year. Seems like a long time back, but the Socceroos did appear against France and Canada during the past month.

Transfers: very low amount of transfer activity during October, with a little bit of movement in the lower English competitions.

Club Level:-

England (Premiership) - Mile Jedinak (Crystal Palace) continues to have played every minute this season for his club. They are struggling and now find themselves at the foot of the table. Club captain, Jedinak is talking about extending his contract. Mark Schwarzer made his Chelsea debut, keeping a clean sheet in a league cup tie against Arsenal. Brad Jones (Liverpool) and Chris Herd (Aston Villa) remain on the pine for their respective teams.

England (Championship) - a few good stories to come out of the Championship during October. Scott McDonald is finding his feet at new club Millwall, now up to 3 goals in 8 starts. Team mate Shane Lowry seems to have dropped out of favour a little with the manager after choosing not to restore him to the starting eleven since his red card in September. Adam Federici made another start for Reading but is struggling to replace Alex McCarthy. After being relieved of the Middlesbrough captaincy, hopefully now Rhys Williams can go from strength to strength.

England (League One) - Bailey Wright is yet to miss a minute for Preston North End this campaign, scoring a few goals too. His club are reaping the benefits as well as they challenge for the automatic promotion places but still a long way to go. James Meredith has a similar story to tell at Bradford City, also not missing a minute of the first 15 league games. Young midfielder Massimo Luongo (Swindon Town) has 5 goals in his 15 starts for the season, making an impressive start to the season. Youngster Bradden Inman has scored his debut goal for the season at Crewe Alexandria. James Wesolowski is back in the starting lineup at Oldham Athletic, making over a dozen appearances.

Germany (Bundesliga) - two starts in his nine leagues appearances marks mixed success for Robbie Kruse at Bayer Leverkusen. He has appeared in the Champions League, and his club is top three. Tough to break into such a solid starting eleven. Mitch Langerak continues on the bench at Dortmund.

Germany (2.Bundesliga) - Mathew Leckie's good form continues at FSV Frankfurt, having now scored 5 times in 12 starts. This form might be making life a little tougher for Nikita Rukavytsya who has one start in his seven appearances, but seems to be linking up with Leckie after being pushed up to attacking midfield

Netherlands (Eredivisie) - after missing a few games with a back injury, Tommy Oar has returned to the starting line-up at FC Utrecht. With the exception of his one-game suspension in August, Jason Davidson's hasn't missed a minute to this campaign at Heracles Almelo. That certainly makes this a breakout season for him and perfectly timed with the WC around the corner.

Netherlands (Eerste Divisie) - young striker Travis Cooper is now up to 10 appearances in all competitions for VVV Venlo.

Austria (Bundesliga) - James Holland also continues in the starting eleven at Austria Wien, but managed to get his first straight red in his professional career against Wiener Neustadt. Apparently a little unlucky too.

Belgium (Pro League) - Mat Ryan number has 6 clean sheets in his 14 appearances, having not missed a minute this season. Impressive start to his European career.

Scotland (Premier) - an interesting predicament for Hearts midfielder Dylan McGowan. He now starts every week in a team that has fallen into administration and looks set to be relegated at the end of the season. While over at Kilmarnock, Jackson Irvine celebrated his Socceroos debut by returning to his club to score a cracker.

Switzerland (Super League) - Dario Vidosic (FC Sion) has now managed 4 goals in his 8 ninety minute outings. Oliver Bozanic is also tracking well at Luzern, having scored 5 times in his 14 appearances.

Cyprus (1. Division) - Robert Stambolziev continues his solid run, 4 goals in 7 appearances. Strangely, all scored at home.

USA (MLS) - you can't keep a good man down. Having scored an impressive 12 goals in 28 appearances, taking his team to the playoffs, and scoring the fastest goal in MLS history. If the rumours surrounding Tim Cahill as the next Socceroo captain are true, we could do much worse. David Carney continues to get full games at left back for NY Red Bulls. Young midfielder Andy Rose has now made 8 appearances for the Seattle Sounders.

China (Super League) - with the league reaching its conclusion, worth noting some stats for the Aussies in this league Ryan McGowan (Shandong) 29 appearances for 2610 minutes, Eddy Bosnar (Guangzhou R&F) 13 appearances for 1137 minutes, Jonas Salley (Guizhou Renhe) 28 appearances for 2520 minutes, Michael Marrone (Shanghai Shenhua) 16 appearances for 1349 minutes and Erik Paartalu (Tianjin Teda) 30 appearances for 2654 minutes.

Japan (J League) - Josh Kennedy has taken his season tally to 11 goals at Nagoya Grampus. Lucas Neill (Omiya Ardija) has dropped out of the starting eleven.

India (I-League) - a bright start for Simon Colosimo (Dempo), having played every minute to date. While Sean Rooney's six goals in seven starts has him tied leader for the Golden Boot at Bengaluru FC

U.A.E (UFL) - of our Aussies in this league Brett Holman (Al Nasr) and Alex Brosque (Al Ain) were the most prominent during October.

Injuries: as we build towards the World Cup, you have to be playing to get selected. Unfortunately the likes of Carl Valeri (Sassuolo) and Adam Sarota (FC Utrecht) are running out of time to impress. A few of the youngsters like Taylor Tombides (knee), Paul Katsidis (hernia) and Liam Graham (knee) have also been yet to appear this season.

Club Competitions:-

Europe
(UEFA Champions League) - group stages but a memorable month for our Aussies. James Holland saw 90 minutes on two occasions, Mitch Langerak got a start while Robbie Kruse came off the bench. Mark Schwarzer sat on the pine for Chelsea, but worth noting Tom Rogic did the same but against Barcelona and Ajax. Not a bad experience I would imagine!! (UEFA Europa League) - no Aussies appeared.

Reserves and Youth:-

There continues to be a large Aussie contingent running around at the reserves/youth level. Brad Smith (Liverpool) has made a solid return from a knee injury. As has 16 year old George Mells who is running around for the Southampton U18's. Another young prospect is Dominic Kurasik who is holding down the keeper position in the Stoke City U18's. Also a mention to young Tom Beadling who has now cemented his spot in the Sunderland U18's. While in Italy Chris Ikonimidis (Lazio) and Reno Piscopo (Inter Milan) continue to shine.

International level:- The France result led to a shake up in Australian football. Thank you to Holger for his efforts in getting us to WC2014, but time to look forward. Ange brings with him the prospect of reshaping the Socceroos squad. His remit is not only the World Cup, but also the Asian Cup in 2015. A great appointment and interesting times ahead. The Canada game saw minutes going into Langerak, Vidosic, Davidson, Leckie and Irvine. Some big decisions lay ahead.

Socceroo (capped) of the month - having transferred from Adelaide United to Sion in Switzerland, Dario Vidosic has hit the ground running. Playing ninety minutes each week, a sprinkling of goals, none better than his brace against Young Boys during October.

Sept - Cahill

Under (uncapped) - Melbourne born striker Billy Konstantinidis has been floating around the Greek leagues for over 8 years. He trialled unsuccessfully in Melbourne over the pre-season but took that in his stride. He signed with Panserraikos and is scoring at nearly a goal a game. At 27 years old, and 191 cm, might be worth a look.

Sept - Wilkinson

Young player (U21) of the month - an apparent unknown to many Australian fans, Sydney born defensive midfielder Steven Ugarkovic has now appeared 5 times in the senior Osijek squad in Croatia. He has made two appearances for Croatia U19's this year.

Sept - Ikonomidis

Zenit St Petersburg 1 Porto 1

Zenit St Petersburg were left to rue Hulk's missed second-half penalty as they were held 1-1 by Porto at the Petrovsky Stadium. Lucho Gonzalez put the home side ahead after 23 minutes, heading home Danilo's delivery from the right, with Hulk on hand to remind Porto of his quality three minutes short of the half hour, when he stole in to latch onto a loose ball, which Nicolas Otamendi, Eliaquim Mangala and goalkeeper Helton all failed to deal with.

The Brazilian was quickly onto Roman Shirokov's aimless pass before coolly dispatching his equaliser, although he spurned the chance to secure Zenit the points early in the second when his 52nd-minute penalty was saved.

Basel 1 Steaua Bucharest 1

Giovanni Sio netted in injury time to keep Basel's UEFA Champions League hopes alive with a 1-1 draw against Steaua Bucharest.

The 24-year-old, who had entered the field 21 minutes into the second half, dived onto a ball from Valentin Stocker in the dying stages to tap past Steaua goalkeeper Ciprian Tatarusanu and rob the Romanians of three points.

Ajax 1 Celtic 0

Lasse Schone kept Ajax's UEFA Champions League hopes alive as they gained revenge over Celtic 1-0 at the Amsterdam Arena.

A fortnight ago Schone came off the bench to net a late consolation as the Scottish champions claimed a 2-1 Group H win at a raucous Celtic Park.

Another frustrating evening appeared to be in store for Frank de Boer's men after Celtic repelled wave after wave of first-half attacks, but Schone claimed the breakthrough with a wonderfully crafted 51st-minute goal.

Barcelona 3 Milan 1

Lionel Messi's brace put Barcelona on the brink of UEFA Champions League qualification after a 3-1 win over Milan.

The Argentina international had not scored in three games prior to the Group H clash, but he put the Catalan giants ahead after half an hour at the Camp Nou, scoring from the penalty spot after Neymar had been brought down by Ignazio Abate.

Sergio Busquets headed the home side further in front nine minutes later, when he got just enough contact on an inswinging set piece from Xavi to guide the ball home and register his second goal of the season.

Milan pulled one back a minute before the break courtesy of Gerard Pique's own goal - with Kaka's cross being diverted past Victor Valdes courtesy of a ricochet off the defender.

But Messi scored his second after 83 minutes, following good link-up play with Cesc Fabregas, as Barcelona moved five points clear at the top of their group and kept up their unbeaten home record.

Napoli 3 Marseille 2

Gonzalo Higuain scored twice as Napoli claimed a 3-2 come-from-behind win over Marseille in the UEFA Champions League on Wednesday.

Napoli moved a step closer to qualifying for the round of 16 with the win - their third from four Group F matches - at the Stadio San Paolo. Andre Ayew headed Marseille into an early lead but they were pegged back by a stunning strike from Gokhan Inler.

yards was followed up by Higuain's first, a fierce strike from inside the area, and although Florian Thauvin levelled for the visitors, the Argentina international had the telling final say.

Higuain's tap-in with 15 minutes left saw Napoli move to second in their group, three points ahead of Dortmund, while the result dashed Marseille's unlikely hopes of reaching the next stage.

Atletico Madrid 4 Austria Vienna 0

Atletico Madrid marched into the last 16 of the Champions League with an impressive 4-0 win over Group G rivals Austria Vienna.

Miranda, Raul Garcia and Filipe Luis all struck before half-time and a persistent Diego Costa rounded off the win late on, having previously missed from the penalty spot.

Diego Simeone's side now have an unassailable seven-point lead at the top of the group and will play in the knockout stages for the first time since 2008/09, while Vienna are still seeking their first win.

Borussia Dortmund 0 Arsenal 1

Arsene Wenger hailed the maturity of his Arsenal side after they edged Borussia Dortmund 1-0 in the UEFA Champions League on Wednesday.

Aaron Ramsey scored his 11th goal for the season as Arsenal moved to the top of Group F with their third win from four matches.

Dortmund controlled the first hour, with Henrikh Mkhitaryan and Jakub Blaszczykowski going close, while Marco Reus had an effort disallowed for offside.

Arsenal withstood Dortmund's best though - last season's beaten finalists had 13 shots on goal to the four of their opponents - before claiming the victory thanks to Ramsey's 62nd-minute header.

Manchester City 5 CSKA Moscow 2

Alvaro Negredo scored a hat-trick as Manchester City beat CSKA Moscow 5-2 to reach the last 16 of the UEFA Champions League.

Argentina striker Sergio Aguero scored twice in the first half to become City's leading scorer of all time in European football and put them on course to qualify from Group D.

Aguero took his tally to nine goals in his last six games in the process and he then set up Negredo for a third goal before Seydou Doumbia pulled one back just before the break.

Spain striker Negredo added a fourth goal early in the second half before Doumbia added his second of the night from the penalty spot.

Negredo then completed his hat-trick in stoppage time as City qualified for the knockout stages, courtesy of their head-to-head record

The former Red Star goalkeeper, Stojkovic, denied Red Star forward Filip Kasalica with an instinctive save in the 53rd minute and, as the tempo dropped after the delay, the home side held on comfortably in the closing stages.

"We were a bit fortunate to score but I think we held our own very well after the goal and could have had a couple more in what was a very tense match with plenty at stake," Red Star coach Slavisa Stojanovic told a news conference.

"It wasn't the best derby ever played and eye-catching moments were few and far between, but we really had to win and after taking the lead so early in the game we just couldn't take any risks."

Partizan coach Vuk Rasovic said: "We were disjointed and didn't play up to our potential, so we only have ourselves to blame for losing."

According to Nenad Borovcanin, senior Serbian sports official, The Serbian government must follow in Britain's footsteps in preventing football hooliganism. Borovcanin, a former professional boxer, made his comments after fan riots before and during Saturday's clash between Red Star and bitter rivals Partizan.

"The response of the state must be strong like the one Britain made when they removed the fences and replaced them with severe punishment for all offenders," the 34-year old secretary of sport told state television RTS on Monday.

"If the authorities are consistent and willing to deal with this problem there is no chance that what we saw on Saturday will happen again, but the government must show that it's stronger than hooligans," he said.

The violent scenes that blighted English football in the 1970s and 1980s have largely been eradicated with the advent of all-seater stadia in the Premier League era.

Dozens of fans were arrested in the Serbian capital as rival supporters clashed on the outskirts of Belgrade before kickoff, while play was held up for 10 minutes in the second half after Partizan fans lit a massive bonfire in their section.

Seats in the south tier had been removed before the game for safety reasons but that did not stop Partizan fans from creating a billowing cloud of smoke which filled the stadium, after they used whatever flammable objects they could get to start the fire.

It was an all too familiar scene in a fixture which has a long history of crowd trouble, with Red Star supporters burning seats in Partizan's stadium and pelting their team bus with rocks before the game in May, when 92 fans were arrested after they also fought running battles in the city.

In 1999, a Red Star supporter was killed by a propelled flare launched

PEPSI Women's WVLP

Melbourne University Futsal Club 6-1 Ashburton Women's Futsal Club

MU - M.Marques 5, L.Sammutter

ASH - N.Mackie

To kick off the only game of Round 6 this week ladder leaders Melbourne Uni took on a rejuvenated Ashburton. In typical Melbourne fashion they got 2 early goals and sat on that lead going into half time leading 2-0 and looking ever more like the team to beat this season.

The second half was much of the same with Francis Land saving anything that slipped through Melbourne's defence (As well as a helping hand from the post) Ashburton never really looked as if they were going to trouble Melbourne and even when they felt they were taking some momentum away Melbourne superstar Marques banged in 4 second half goals to take her tally to 5 for the night and finish off Ashburton with Naomi Mackie getting Ashburton's only goal for the night. Marques was once again the star of the show as she looks this season's front runner for MVP as for Ashburton they have failed to beat anyone in the top 4 as they will need to improve if they are to crack the top 4 this season.

Next up a top 4 clash was on the card Metropolitan taking on Pascoe Vale. It was last seasons champions who got off to the better start racing out to a 3-0 lead. Late in the half Metropolitan pulled 2 goals back to keep them in the contest.

The second half was a much more heated contest as Metro fought for an equaliser but they were thwarted by quick goals from Caro & Armellini blew the game out. Dino Redzepovic dragged one back but as the game looked done and dusted Adam Husseni was sent off for a second bookable offence flooring Soufi and they took full advantage as Soufi finished them off to end an eventful night at the office that keeps Pascoe Vale in touch with the

2013/14 NIKE Men's VLP

Fitzroy Futsal Club 3 - 0 Hume Futsal Club

FTZ: A. Fusca, M. Burton, J. Ortiz

The first game to kick off Round 7 saw a depleted Fitzroy, without Fernando, Ale Granollers and the Monteleone brothers go up against a full strength Hume outfit who welcomed their returning star Vadim Mazurskiy. With only one available sub on the bench, it was no surprise that the first half ended in a 0-0 stalemate. Although it's fair to be said that Hume number one Ryan Timmins was the busier of the two keepers. The second half was shot into life as two quick goals from Fitzroy's Mark Burton and Jeremy Ortiz put their side well in control to completely stun Hume. Vadim Mazurskiy did his best to get his side back into the game hitting the foot of the post on two occasions, but a late goal from Ange Fusca put the result beyond any doubt. A very disciplined and organised display of futsal by Todd Miles' lads, playing the smarter game and stifled Hume's fifth-man power play with aplomb.

Juso Julardzija (Front) was in unstoppable form on his way to bagging 5.

In the English Premier League, we have a clear leader at the top. After a 2-0 home win over an inform Liverpool, Arsenal, (of all clubs) have opened up a five point gap thanks in no small part to their classy looking midfield. The summer mega signing of the little maestro Mesut Ozil has certainly lifted the gooners who have had to make do with selling their big name stars in recent years. The form of the German international has left many questioning the decision of Real Madrid to sell such a talent even with the hefty fee they received. But if anybody was in any doubt about his impact in Spain just look at his now famous love child.

As for the A-League, there has been a lot of controversy surrounding the injury of Melbourne Heart captain, Harry Kewell, who has missed a number of weeks for apparent whiplash. But it seems as though one crafty fan has discovered the real reason behind the former Socceroo's absence.

As I write this week's column, I'm still in a state of shock at the news that Mark Schwarzer has retired from international football and we will no longer get to see him pull on the Socceroos' jersey.

Despite the fact he is 41 and approaching the end of his career, the sudden announcement of his retirement still took me by surprise. I guess I had it in my mind he would be protecting the onion bag for the Socceroos in Brazil at next year's World Cup. Schwarzer's career, both for clubs he has represented and in the

TWEETS OF THE WEEK

Compiled by Roy Skillen

The other big talking point of the league has been the new playing style of Adelaide Utd. The former Barcelona youth coach Josep Gombau has tried his best to implement a fast paced possession type game, apparently along side making a new movie.

Looks like it could be worth a watch but this is just wrong.

Socceroos' jersey has been a decorated one. He is arguably one of the best players to ever represent the Socceroos'. He retires holding the record as being the most capped Socceroo, racking up 109 games as a Socceroo in 19 years of representation.

His highlights as a Socceroo include playing at both the 2006 and 2010 World Cups and the 2007 and 2011 Asian Cups, including a runners-up medal at the 2011 Asian Cup.

His highlights stretch beyond his international career, having had success at several of the clubs he has represented.

The majority of his career highlights took place have taken place whilst he has played his football in England, representing two of the lower profile clubs, Middlesbrough and Fulham.

Schwarzer was part of the Mid-des-tiny by taking charge of Melbourne Victory on a two-year contract after Ange Postecoglou left to take up his role with the Socceroos. Kevin is certainly taking his role seriously. He has been talking up his mentorship under Ange to anybody who will listen and even looks very dapper in his new managerial suit. Although the boys at South Melbourne don't seem to think he looks all that hot.

Despite his critics you simply can't argue with Kevin Muscat's 100% coaching record. Melbourne Victory looked good value for their 3-2 win over Wellington in a match that saw Archie Thompson stem his violence against corner flags with a very interesting new goal celebration.

The weekends games did see another fantastic match up involving Western Sydney whose fans continue to lead the way when it comes to creating an atmosphere. But one twitter troll wasn't very impressed.

dlesbrough teams that lost back to back English League Cup finals in 1996/97 and 1997/98. The first final was lost 1-0 to Ipswich Town in a replay and the second to Chelsea with a 2-0 score line.

Schwarzer collected a winner's medallion when Middlesbrough recorded a 2-1 victory over Bolton in the 2003/04 English League Cup final.

Schwarzer collected a further 2 runners up medallions, this time in the UEFA Cup. He received his first European medal when Middlesbrough lost the 2005/06 to Spanish team Sevilla 4-0 in the final.

Schwarzer's second runners up medal in Europe came in the 2009/10 UEFA Cup final when Fulham lost to Atletico Madrid, 2-1.

With Schwarzer retiring, the questions on many Soccer fans lips is who will be given the honour of filling the big shoes left to be filled by Schwarzer. And newly appointed Soccer coach Ange Postecoglou has a strong field of goalkeepers to choose from.

Among those players in consideration for the position are Borussia Dortmund's Mitch Langerak, Liverpool's Brad Jones, Adelaide's Eugene Galekovic, Reading's Adam Federici and Club Bruges' custodian Matt Ryan.

Schwarzer will continue his playing career at Chelsea's as their reserve keeper but is out of contract at the end of the year.

Who can ever forget 16th November 2005. Mark Schwarzer performed heroics in the penalty shoot-out against Uruguay and the Socceroos were finally off to a World Cup after over 30 years of trying.

It was interesting to hear some of the talkback callers on Melbourne radio's 1116 SEN last week on the day Kevin Muscat was appointed as Melbourne Victory's new coach. Many were of the belief that as a player who played the game to the limits, and beyond, of the allowed physicality that he would be transforming the team into what they would call a "pack of hacks".

Clearly the combative aggression he displayed on the park has overshadowed most of his virtues, being an excellent reader of the game and a better than average passer of the ball. It's probably not surprising that radio talkback callers can get caught up in massive generalisations and stereotyping, but unless he makes a move to sign Jerome Polenz from Western Sydney Warriors I don't think Victory fans should be too concerned.

This week it was a different topic on SEN that caught my attention, an interview with Dave Samson, President of the Miami Marlins of the Major League Baseball National League. When asked what was the biggest challenge facing his side, he said it was the fact that "we stink". Losing over 100 games in their past season, a lack of on-field success was reflected with diminishing attendances. His blunt honesty was welcomed by numerous talkback callers and SMS feedback, and was in stark contrast to that of Melbourne Heart coach John Aloisi following their weekend loss to Brisbane Roar.

Heart did have the better of the first half, but an inability to convert this to the scoreboard was punished when Brisbane lifted their intensity after the break and claimed another scalp. There can be narrow defeats, and gallant defeats but in the end they are just losses. Aloisi's post-match praise for his team efforts rubbed many the wrong way because a team without a win for the season, and no history of success really needs to demand more from its playing group if it is ever to increase the very small niche it has in the Victorian football landscape.

Roar captain Matt Smith didn't hide his displeasure at his side's poor first half in the pitchside interview at the start of the break. Whilst it was good to see some genuine emotion rather than the usual bland cliches, these interviews really need to be given the flick. They generally give very little insight, and clearly are an annoyance to the players who have more important matters on their mind. What will it take for the axe to fall? A interviewer being physically brushed aside? An F-Bomb? A C-Bomb? It's also a joke that the FFA can allow these interviews to take place when it would fine or suspend a player who honestly aired an opinion on the standard of refereeing.

A-League referees are not having the best of seasons, a new low-light being reached with a free-kick awarded for a player ruled offside after a throw-in. There's a danger of becoming a laughing stock as Fox Sports captures all these errors which would go unnoticed in park football where you would expect they may occur.

Is BHP closing their steelworks in Newcastle back in 1999 the reason why the fences at Hunter Stadium are not up to scratch? The Jets v Mariners game saw the second time I've seen the perimeter fence give way under over-exuberant goal celebrations. The Jets fans have had little to cheer about so far this season. It would have been nice had Ljubo Milicevic had been amongst them, and upon stumbling onto the pitch taken the opportunity to take the ball and dribble it until dispossessed or assualted by security guards.

Congratulations to Mark Schwarzer as he drew the curtain on one of the all-time great Socceroo careers. Whilst a new broom needs to go through the team, it's probably not the area that needed most attention. It's a shame that he felt it was time to call his international retirement when at season's end he may still be our keeper performing most regularly at the highest level.

Brazil Pick Robinho After Two Year Absence

Latin Wrap

Francis Fields

AC Milan forward Robinho was the surprise choice this week when coach Luiz Felipe Scolari named Brazil's squad to face Honduras and Chile in friendlies next week.

The mercurial former Manchester City player, who has scored 28 goals in 84 games for Brazil, was recalled after a two-year absence and will travel to North America for the two matches as the host nation continue their build-up to the 2014 World Cup.

Robinho has returned to his old form this season and although he only has three goals in 13 appearances for Milan, his all-round play has improved.

Chelsea winger Willian and 19-year-old central defender Marquinhos of Paris St Germain were also included in the squad but Tottenham Hotspur midfielder Sandro was left out after only just returning to Premier League action after injury.

Kaká, who has also shown signs of a return to form at AC Milan, missed out. Scolari called up 22 players, only two of whom play their football in Brazil.

With the domestic championship in its final weeks, the coach said he deliberately avoided taking too many players from the local clubs.

Atletico Mineiro goalkeeper Victor will start the first game against Honduras, said Scolari. Victor and fellow goalkeepers, Botafogo's Jefferson and Diego Cavalieri of Fluminense are vying for two World Cup spots alongside first-choice Júlio César.

Brazil take on Honduras in Miami, US on November 16 before meeting Chile in Toronto, Canada three days later.

MARKARIAN RESIGNS FOR PERU

Sergio Markarián has turned down an offer to stay on as Peru coach after they failed to qualify for next year's World Cup in Brazil.

The 68-year-old has previously coached clubs in Paraguay, Chile and Peru, winning domestic titles in all three countries, as well as Greece and Mexico.

He led Paraguay through 2002 World Cup qualifying but was then sacked and replaced by Italian Cesare Maldini for the finals.

During his spell in Greece, where he coached Ionikos, Panathinaikos and Iraklis, he was known for grinding out low-scoring wins.

Peru, who have not qualified for a World Cup since 1982, finished seventh in the nine-team South American qualifying group with 15 points from 16 games. They managed only one point in eight games away from home.

Robinho has expressed delight in returning for Brazil

Their most impressive performance under Markarián was at the Copa América in 2011 where they reached the semi-finals.

MUSLERA OUT FOR URUGUAY

Uruguay goalkeeper Fernando Muslera will miss the first leg of their intercontinental World Cup playoff against Jordan next week due to injury.

Muslera, who plays for Galatasaray in Turkey, suffered a fractured toe on Sunday and will miss the match on November 13, but Paris St Germain striker Edinson Cavani, who is nursing a pulled leg muscle, was included in the 24-man squad announced on Tuesday.

Uruguay would fly to Istanbul and begin their preparations on Saturday before moving to Amman next Monday for the first leg, the Uruguayan FA said on its website.

The return leg will be played in Montevideo a week later with the winners taking a berth at the 2014 World Cup finals in Brazil.

SABELLA'S LATEST CALL-UP

Argentina coach Alejandro Sabella has named two uncapped defenders in his squad for friendlies in the United States against Ecuador and Bosnia later this month.

Fiorentina's Facundo Roncaglia and Lucas Orbán of Girondins Bordeaux in the French Ligue 1 were called up as Sabella looks to shore up a defence that has been frequently exposed by the counter-attack ahead of next year's World Cup finals.

Sabella also recalled Porto centre back Nicolás Otamendi, a member of Diego Maradona's 2010 World Cup squad in South Africa who won the last of his 15 caps under Sabella in a 1-0 qualifier defeat away to Venezuela two years ago.

He eventually chose to play for the world champions, and while Pele has admitted he is disappointed, he called on his countrymen to respect Costa's decision.

"It's a matter of patriotism. I wanted him to represent Brazil, but maybe he wouldn't have even been in the starting XI," he said.

"If he felt discredited in Brazil then his attitude was right. I think Costa - who has scored 15 goals in 13 games in all competitions for Atletico this season - could make his first Spain appearance in the friendly against South Africa on November 19.

Soccerex cancelled due to Rio unrest

Organisers of the Soccerex Global Convention have confirmed the upcoming event in Rio de Janeiro has been cancelled due to civil unrest.

The decision, made by the Rio de Janeiro State Secretary of Sport, was revealed by Soccerex on Tuesday and is likely to raise more questions over safety ahead of next year's FIFA World Cup in Brazil.

Soccerex have notified the Rio State Government of their intention to initiate legal proceedings in order to seek compensation.

The annual conference, which brings together key figures in the game from across the globe, was due to be held at the iconic Maracana Stadium - the venue for the 2014 World Cup final - from November 30 to December 5.

A Soccerex statement said: "Preparations for the event at the Maracana Stadium were well advanced with content planned, speakers confirmed and partnerships in place.

"To be summarily cancelled in such a cavalier fashion, having hosted 33 events over five continents is extremely frustrating but nevertheless it has happened and is in contravention of all of the contractual obligations of the Rio State Government, who have been

Pele: I wanted Costa to play for Brazil

Brazil legend Pele has revealed he wanted Diego Costa to represent his country, rather than Spain.

The Atletico Madrid forward, who appeared in two friendlies for Brazil earlier this year, had been at the centre of a dispute over which country he should play for, having attained dual nationality in Spain.

we have to respect his decision.

"He tried to explain that he hasn't been recognized for some time and for that reason took the decision to play for Spain. He was courageous and I understand.

"He is another player that could have represented Brazil. I have the impression that he made the right decision given that he hasn't been recognized in Brazil."

notified of our intention to instigate legal proceedings for substantial compensation."

Protests were held during this year's Confederations Cup in Brazil, mainly over the cost of hosting the World Cup when some Brazilians feel the money should be spent on health, education and transport.

Soccerex chief executive Duncan Revie said: "On behalf of all at Soccerex, I would like to apologize to every business, football club, league, federation and media organisation affected by this news.

"This unique and cruel conclusion to our time in Rio was completely out of our hands and everyone who has attended a Soccerex event over the last 18 years will know this is not how we do business.

"We must look forward now to 2014, to our new event calendar and the Global Convention in Manchester."

Suarez happy' at Liverpool
Luis Suarez has played down speculation linking him with a January transfer to Real Madrid by insisting he is happy at Liverpool.

The Uruguay international was involved in a protracted saga regarding his future in the close-season as he agitated for a move to a club in the UEFA Champions League.

Liverpool's Premier League rivals Arsenal had two bids rejected for the striker, while La Liga giants Real were also said to be interested in his services.

Rumours persist that Real will launch a move for Suarez in the next transfer window as manager Carlo Ancelotti seeks to boost his side's firepower further following the world-record capture of Gareth Bale in September.

However, the 26-year-old - who has scored six goals in five Premier League appearances since returning from suspension - has indicated he is satisfied with life on Merseyside as Liverpool bid to return to the Champions League.

"I know nothing of any interest from Real Madrid, and I am happy with Liverpool," Suarez told Uruguayan radio station Sport 890.

"In the team we are all really excited, and looking forward to a good season. We have been at the top so far and we are still aiming at the top."

"We believe in the team and we believe we can have a really good season - an exciting season."

"The Premier League is the best league there is - the stadiums, the atmosphere and the fans make football here so entertaining."

Suarez's public desire to leave Anfield led to Liverpool boss Brendan Rodgers ordering him to train away from the rest of the first-team squad for a short period.

However, the former Ajax captain has revealed that the support of his team-mates and the Liverpool fans has had a major impact on helping him feel settled at the club once again.

Chelsea feels the blues

After the final whistle, there was a waiting period to see what Chelsea boss Jose Mourinho would say about why his side lost 2-0 to Newcastle United.

Would he blame the terrible weather? That Newcastle were lucky? Or that they were the better team on the day and failed to capitalise?

But Mourinho went straight to it: he blamed himself for selecting a poor team and his players for not executing the game plan. He was straight and honest, and more importantly, he was right. This was Chelsea's worst performance of the season.

"The result is a consequence of one team that was not there," said the Chelsea boss.

"I feel I made 11 mistakes. Of course I'm exaggerating, we had some guys with normal good performances but the overall feeling is I made 11 bad choices. It was a really bad performance from us. In the first 45 minutes we played as if it was a friendly."

A scintillating second half by the Magpies ended Chelsea's 6 match run

Hazard and Mata are known to start out on the wings, before drifting in field. With Oscar in the middle, Chelsea flooded the centre of the pitch, narrowing their play, but they lacked any true width. With the fullbacks unwilling to push forward, this made them look one-dimensional in attack.

So the surprise is why Mourinho selected the trio in the first place. The idea it seemed was that Newcastle was in patchy form, with a leaky defence. The trio should have technically carved them up, but Alan Pardew played his cards

Lining up in 4-4-2, Pardew was happy to contain the Blues in the first period, before trying to sniff out a winner in the second. They got two thanks to Yoan Gouffran and Loic Remy.

"We were a bit conservative at first," Pardew said. "But we knew we could put them under pressure in the second half, we did and it worked."

"Yohan [Cabaye] executed it on the money and Gouff connected brilliantly," Pardew said.

"I felt confident we could win from that point. We've been playing well lately but we got the break today. We've got quality and if we keep this work rate up we've got a chance of having a good season."

The pressure has been building at St. James' Park in recent weeks after Newcastle's average start to the season. The 2-1 loss to Tyneside rivals, Sunderland last weekend, coupled with owner Mike Ashley banning three local newspapers from games, has seen fans reach boiling point.

But credit should be handed to Pardew, who has managed to keep a cool face in these troubled times. He'll be hoping that Newcastle can continue the dose when it faces Tottenham next week.

One To Watch This Weekend...

Manchester City's away form has been poor this season. Will it continue when they travel to the Stadium of Light to face Sunderland? The Black Cats look a new team under Gus Poyet, so maybe a shock result isn't too far off.

EPL Preview

Fans and haters of this wrap might be wondering why there is another preview on Arsenal this week. It's because it faces Manchester United in another Big-Six clash, so it deserves a bit of column space.

It's also because media pundits have jumped on board the Arsenal-championship-contenders bandwagon. It's 2-0 win over Liverpool last weekend showcased the Gunners' grit to win, but also the swagger in which it won, especially following its losses to Dortmund and Chelsea in previous weeks.

The Gunners were fluent in attack, and rock solid in the back, limiting the creative talents of Liverpool's "SAS" striker force of Luis Suarez and Daniel Sturridge and Brazilian playmaker Coutinho.

Arsene Wenger praised his side's performance after the game.

"It was important to respond to convince people that we can win these big games," said Wenger.

"To win it in a convincing way is even more important."

"We have plenty of big games coming up and we have the ability to deal well with them."

Those big games are coming thick and fast. On Wednesday morning, the Gunners travel to Dortmund in a crucial Champions League clash, before flying off to Old Trafford next Sunday.

The game might not have the allure of the old Wenger-Ferguson days, but it still packs a punch. David Moyes is slowly getting used to things are Manchester, and the Red Devils have picked up its form recently.

It might be playing to its swaggering best, but they are collecting points, and only are eight points behind Arsenal; an easy lead to make up this early in the season.

Since the 2-1 loss to West Bromwich at home, it's won five out of seven, drawing the other two. In the process, United are one win away from securing a Champions League quarterfinal place, as well as reaching the Capitol One Cup quarterfinals, where it faces off against Stoke City.

Perhaps the biggest change to Moyes' reign has been the impressive form of Wayne Rooney. The English international scored and set up another in United's 3-1 win of Fulham over the weekend.

Rumours of discontent between Sir Alex Ferguson and Rooney have been around for while, so the change of management has no doubt given the striker an extra incentive. It could be fact that Rooney is now United's main man again, playing every game – and striking up quite a partnership with Robin Van Persie.

Moyes praised his strike force, hailing them as one of the best in the Premier League.

"There were real signs of great combination play between them," he said.

"I think they both made a goal for each other. There was good link-up play and it was great they both got on the score sheet.

"That's what forwards do and I've always said you need them both to score a lot of goals to be successful. They're both incredibly talented and understand each other."

Moyes will be looking to Van Persie and Rooney to continue their form this against the firing Gunners. They have the small task of traveling to San Sebastian to play against Real Sociedad for the Champions League before though.

So too, do Arsenal, which means both sides will rotate some players around. But it will hard to see both sides' key players not playing in a game, which hopefully sparks like the days of old.

Bayern Munich continue to dominate in fine style in the Bundesliga and UEFA Champions League competitions ing this full press to good effect so many choose to neglect it. One reason for this may be down to the organisation required to master this technique. All 11 players in the side have to be fully committed to it if it's going to be a success. If one player fails to press at the time he is suppose too or cannot keep up the level of pressuring demanded for the full 90 minutes then it becomes a very dangerous strategy. A simple ball around the corner can suddenly remove five or six players from the game if the pressure is not applied correctly leaving the defensive side in a lot of trouble and often outnumbered.

With the tempo of the Premier League being much higher than most other top divisions in Europe the transition from defence to attack is far quicker and frequent which does not lend itself well to a full defensive press system if it falls short in quality. But if it's delivered well then the positive outcomes are there for all to see, with Southampton an obvious example of its benefits. It's very much a high risk high reward strategy.

Further down the English league ladder the challenges and threats of implicating the full press can be even more apparent than in the top divisions. Harry Wheeler, UEFA A licence holder and coach at non-league St Albans City, said: "For sides in non-league it's risky. If done well it's just as effective but on the basis that you train twice a week maximum the time to work on it and get it spot on is difficult without leaving exposed gaps in match play.

"The other problem you have is that if the whole team as a unit presses high then the centre backs become exposed to the ball over the top and the counter. The majority of centre backs at non-league level are very good in the air but are not so quick so it would always be a risk playing that tactic if the ball isn't won higher up."

He added: "Any centre half that is very good in the air and also very quick to cover rarely plays non-league and is normally found in the professional game. But if the central defenders decide to be the only ones who don't press and they sit because of the counter attack risk you will start leaving gaps and that then causes problems these days because the number ten position is so common."

Despite Wheeler's comments being directed at non-league football his thoughts give a potential insight into why Andre Villas Boas 'failed' at Chelsea and was sacked by Blues owner Roman Abramovich after less than a year.

The now Tottenham Hotspur boss tried to impose a high back line at his former employers with an emphasis being placed on a high tempo defensive press. This worked superbly well at Porto – playing a huge part in winning the Portuguese league title, Cup and Europa League in the same season – but at Chelsea it fell short due to the lack of pace at the heart of the defence. John Terry has never been the fastest of defenders and after being asked to play high up the pitch he and either David Luiz or Gary Cahill were found out in behind, exemplifying the issue with slow centre backs in a full defensive press and proving it is not just an exclusive problem of non-league clubs.

Barcelona and Bayern Munich have mastered the full defensive press and it is a significant reason why they stand as Europe's elite. But there are foundations at both these clubs, including the likes of Lionel Messi and Arjen Robben, which will convince many it is not a key reason for their success. But with Southampton suddenly shooting up the Premier League after implementing the tactic it may provoke many into acknowledging its merits and adopting a technique which has proven success if adopted correctly.

English football take note.

Cerci ends Roma streak

Former Roma youth player Alessio Cerci came back to haunt his former club as he netted the goal which ended Roma's winning streak to the campaign.

As a prodigious talent in Roma's youth side, Alessio Cerci was known as "the [Thierry] Henry from Valmontone" due to his playing style. Then 15, Fabio Capello invited Cerci to a day training with the senior side. When informed by his Coach, Cerci thought it was a joke and didn't show. Capello forgave him for the misunderstanding, but it's the sort of incident which has been holding Cerci up for much of his career.

He made his first-team debut aged 16, but failed to establish himself in subsequent seasons, making just four Giallorossi appearances. Sent to Serie B to gain experience, a spell at Brescia was followed by a move to Pisa in 2007-08 which boosted Cerci. Under the guidance of Giampiero Ventura he enjoyed a fine season as Pisa were very nearly promoted to Serie A. Injuries didn't help a top-flight stint at Atalanta, nor could Cerci establish himself in a second spell at Roma.

He was cut loose, sold to Fiorentina in 2010. Given a chance to finally realise his potential, the move did anything but. Cerci joined a team on the slide and was marked as a scapegoat for their issues. Stories of a cocky attitude didn't help. It got Cerci on the wrong side of Coach Sinisa Mihajlovic, then Delio Rossi. And he never endeared himself to the fans.

Cerci had all the tools to become a fine player, but never showed it consistently. His professionalism was questionable. He was said to love cars more than football. "There's been an extraordinary furore around me. Unmanageable Cerci. Arrogant Cerci. Cerci who only thinks about nice cars... So what? Many people like cars and I mean no harm," was the rebuff. He was raking up more parking tickets than goals, another criticism.

After a pre-season incident at a restaurant involving teammates and drinking – Cerci denies he was involved – the club deemed it time he moved on. Along came Torino, now coached by Ventura.

Like at Pisa, Cerci was instantly at ease under the veteran boss. As a winger in his dubbed 4-2-4 system, Cerci became a leader. He finally showed greater consistency. His first goal came, symbolically, at former club Fiorentina. Only striker Rolando Bianchi netted more times last season.

For Cerci it was redemption. He was finally being recognised for on-pitch exploits, not the supposed ones off it. His form was noticed by Cesare Prandelli. Cerci made his Italy debut last March, a friendly draw with Brazil. He's made six subsequent appearances, including at the Confederations Cup. Heading to Brazil 2014, Cerci is on Prandelli's radar. He may never have emulated Henry, but Cerci has taken his game to the next level at Torino.

Approaching the hour, the visitors still led. Morgan De Sanctis was a lot less than it deserved to over the course of this season. Partly that was down to our lack of experience, but they needed to write this small page in the history books and stopped the team that had been considered 'unstoppable.'

The meeting of Juventus and Napoli takes on added significance given Roma's result. Neither side wants to give up ground to the Giallorossi, so expect this match between the rivals to be even more fiery than usual.

As for Cerci, it was somehow fitting that he would end the streak. It was a small reminder to the Giallorossi of his capabilities. And Torino President Urbano Cairo won't let go of his star man. "Cerci is a really important player and I'm keeping a tight grip on him... His valuation? Nobody has asked me for him lately and he's not for sale anyway."

Casillas Returns From Hiatus To Save Real

Controversially banished by club and country, former Spanish World Cup winning captain Iker Casillas returned as goalkeeper of Real Madrid in Turin, for the 4th round clash between his club and Italian Champions Juventus.

In a man of the match performance, Iker Casillas repeatedly made extraordinary save after extraordinary save, to deny Juventus multiple goals, in what could have been a thrilling and memorable high scoring UEFA Champions League victory for the home team.

Italian Real Madrid Coach Carlo Ancelotti was full of praise for his goal keeper after the match;

"He played a very good game. He was decisive and made two great saves in the first half. For him it is easy to not play every game, but he is ready to do it and that means he's very professional. We reacted so well in the second half. I'm very happy about this: the courage and the attitude. In the first half we defended too deep, allowing space to Paul Pogba and Claudio Marchisio. After that, we changed and pressed more in the midfield. Ramos was in the starting XI to cover gaps. Because in Madrid, Juventus crossed too many balls in and Ramos is so good with the head. He played well, he is a great player but him at right-back is only temporary."

The draw leaves Real Madrid 6 points in front of its closest opponent, with a total of 10 points, ahead of Galatasaray from Turkey and FC Copenhagen from Denmark who are both on 4 points, and Juventus bottom of the group with just 3 points.

Spanish compatriots Real Sociedad de Futbol earned their first UEFA Champions League point with a 0-0 home draw against English Champions Manchester United. Despite a typical soft penalty awarded to Manchester's Ashley Young, perhaps justice was served as Sociedad goalkeeper Claudio Bravo denied Robin Van Persie's spot kick.

Despite remaining bottom of the group, Sociedad players were proud of their result, Claudio Bravo had this to say after the game; "We gave our all and overall we leave with a positive feeling. It is special playing Manchester United, you have got to be super concentrated in every single moment. While there is still a mathematical possibility of qualifying for the next round we will keep fighting to do just that."
